On May 15, 2018, the Board of Supervisors authorized the consideration of Comprehensive Plan Amendment 2018-III-DS1, for Land Unit J of the Dulles Suburban Center.

The Board motion stated that the Plan amendment should consider the addition of new land uses generally within the current overall baseline intensity of .05 FAR, and that the review should include potential new areas for residential development, including areas not currently envisioned for residential use by the Plan as a result of airport noise contours identified on a 1992 map. ## Neighborhood Book Exchange Program Aims to Promote Community Literacy

The Neighborhood Book Exchange is an adaptation of a simple concept: Take a book, leave a book.

Each participating center has installed an outdoor blue book cabinet near the main entrance to the building. The reading material in these blue cabinets are free to any member of the community to take home and keep as long as they like. All that is asked is that those who take a book leave one in its place to share with our neighbors (if they are able). It is that simple! No deadlines. No overdue notices. No late fees.

Access to the Neighborhood Book Exchange is open 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, even on holidays!

Locations:

- Bailey's Community Center (5920 Summers Lane, Falls Church, VA)
- Burgundy Community Center (5516 Norton Road, Alexandria, VA)
- Gum Springs Community Center (8100 Fordson Road, Alexandria, VA)
- Huntington Community Center (5751 Liberty Drive, Alexandria, VA)
- James Lee Community Center (2855 Annandale Road, Falls Church, VA)
- Mott Community Center (12111 Braddock Road, Fairfax, VA)
- Pinn Community Center (10225 Zion Drive, Fairfax, VA)
- Willston Community Center (6131 Willston Drive, Falls Church, VA)

The Green Column

(Contractors spread crushed glass to create a bedding for the new sanitary sewer pipe.)

Fairfax County Uses Crushed Glass in Construction Project

Sanitary sewer replacement projects rarely make headline news. Digging up, repairing, and replacing aging pipes is just part of wastewater infrastructure's life cycle. But when a project embraces sustainable practices and the idea of a circular economy and finds a constructive use for a waste product, it is worth mentioning.

One example, a project along Flatlick Branch in Fairfax County's Sully Magisterial District, is currently underway. When the new sewer pipe is placed in the ground, it will rest on a bed of crushed glass instead of the traditional bedding of quarried stone. In this video, Channel 16 interviews project manager, Suzy Harding.

The Glass Problem:

Unfortunately, the market for recycled glass in our area has been declining for years, and glass is notoriously difficult to process. Glass creates many problems for single-stream recycling. It is heavy, which adds cost to transporting recyclables to and from recycling centers. Glass containers sometimes break during transportation and the abrasive broken glass damages the machinery at the material recovery facilities (MRFs). Glass also contaminates bales of other more valuable items, such as cardboard and plastic.

For years, most glass has passed through the recycling process as residue, or waste. Some of the glass is applied as landfill cover, but most of it is simply landfilled with other unrecyclable waste.

A New Use for Glass:

Residents are encouraged to deliver their clean glass to drop-off areas located at the I-95 landfill complex in Lorton, and the I-66 transfer station in Fairfax. Glass that is taken by residents to drop-off sites is transported to Fairfax County's glass processing plant. The crushed glass has been tested and approved for construction uses, such as bedding and fill in the Flatlick Branch sanitary sewer replacement project. Using glass recovered in Fairfax County reduces the county's reliance on quarried stone, which lowers material costs and provides an alternative waste use for glass. The crushed glass should support the sanitary sewer pipe for decades to come.
